

HACKNEY'S young sports people did the borough proud when they achieved their highest ever position at the London Youth Games. The borough finished fourth out of 33 boroughs from across London, with 11 team medals and 71 individual medals. There was more to celebrate with para-athletes winning the overall Para

Games Trophy. For more on their fantastic efforts see pages 4-5.

AMPAIGNERS have welcomed a Government announcement that it will back down on plans to cut more than £25million from the borough's schools: but the Council has called for clarity about where the extra funding will come from.

Ahead of the announcement on 17 July, headteachers and governors from across Hackney joined council leaders in co-signing a letter to the Secretary of State for Education, Justine Greening, calling on her to halt plans to overhaul the national funding formula for schools.

The plans, announced last year, aimed to share funding more evenly across the country by removing money from better funded areas. It would have made Hackney schools £25million worse off by 2019, one of the biggest cuts in the country.

destinationhackney.co.uk

This translated to £914 less per pupil: or 692 fewer teachers across the borough. Ms Greening pledged to give an extra £1.3billion to schools in England, but admitted this money would come from elsewhere in the education budget.

Deputy Mayor of Hackney, Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, said: "This may be badged up as extra funding but it isn't. It's taken from existing education budgets, and we urge Ms Greening to share full details of how this will work.

"Its important that headteachers and governors know where they stand. We will continue to press for fair funding for our schools until we have a guarantee that Hackney will not be unfairly affected by future proposals."

A fairer system

FORTNIGHT of action to promote a fairer private renting system has underlined the Council's commitment to supporting the 32,000 private renting households in the borough.

With two in three private renters in Hackney saying their repairs aren't done when needed, one-third of privately rented homes nationwide failing to meet basic standards, and local rent levels increasing 20 per cent over the past five years, the Better Renting campaign focuses both on supporting private renters and working with landlords and letting agents to offer a fairer deal to tenants.

Activities taking place during the Better Renting campaign include:

• Pop-up stalls around the borough for private renters to get support and advice from renting experts Our campaign shows our commitment to creating a fairer and more transparent system for private renters

- Getting landlords trained up through the London Landlords Accreditation Scheme
- Writing to Government setting out the changes the Council wants to see to create fairer regulation
- Direct communications to local landlords so that they fully understand their responsibilities
- A poster and social media campaign to raise awareness of the current challenges in the private rented sector.

Cllr Sem Moema, Mayoral Adviser for Private Renting and Housing Affordability, said: "With more than 12,000 households on our housing waiting list and homeownership unrealistic for so many, the number of private renters in Hackney continues to grow and is becoming the only option for much of the borough.

"Which is why our new Better Renting campaign is so important.

"It shows our commitment to creating a fairer and more transparent system for private renters in the borough, not just by calling on the Government to introduce the regulations the sector needs, but also by supporting private renters here in Hackney and encouraging local landlords and letting agents to do the right thing."

For more updates, follow #BetterRenting on Twitter.

'Scrap letting fees now'

A PIONEERING scheme has been launched to scrap letting fees for private renters, ahead of a formal ban by Government. The Council is calling on letting agents to stop unfair charges for private renters for services such as processing, amending or renewing a tenancy agreement, which can often run into hundreds of pounds. It forms part of the Council's Better Renting campaign. The announcement comes in light of Government proposals to ban letting agent fees in England, but without setting out when or how this will come into force. By introducing its own scheme, Hackney wants to ensure local renters can start to benefit straight away. Independent Stoke Newington letting agents Julian Reid Estate Agents is backing the campaign. Julian said: "We've always taken the view that we should be transparent about what a tenant will pay at the start of the tenancy and don't think the fact we charge fees puts us at a disadvantage against our competitors." Cllr Sem Moema added: "We encourage all letting agents in Hackney to sign up to scrap the fees. Not only will this help local businesses get ahead of the competition in advance of any full ban by Government, we want to demonstrate that Hackney is a forward-thinking borough that is committed to creating a fairer and more transparent system for private renters."

OSTER carers came together at a Bollywood-themed celebration held to thank them for all the amazing work they do for the borough.

The annual evening of fun and entertainment on 7 July was organised by the Council and Hackney Foster Carers' Council to acknowledge foster carers dedication to Hackney's looked after children and young people.

There was much to celebrate over the past 12 months, with the borough's looked after young people achieving great GCSE results; a positive Ofsted inspection of the Council's Children and Families Service; and the highest number of new foster carer approvals in North London.

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: "The work our foster carers do is invaluable.

"They open their homes and their lives to us, so we can ensure our children go to loving homes, and we appreciate this.

"We also recognise the importance of support carers who are there when they are needed and help remind our foster carers that they have the skills to overcome challenges they face."

Glassware was awarded to 18 foster carers marking five, 10, 15 or over 25 years of service.

Among them was Rubena Ahmed, who has fostered with Hackney for 25 years. In this time, she has provided care for over 250 children some of whom she is still in contact with.

When asked about her experience as a foster carer, Rubena said: "I have

News in brief

Tower Court design wins award

THE innovative redevelopment of Tower Court estate in Stamford Hill was recognised at this year's Housing Design Awards.

The Council project, designed by Adam Khan Architects in collaboration with muf architecture/art was one of just 16 winners at the ceremony on 10 July.

The designs will transform Tower Court with more than 130 homes, including some for social rent and shared ownership paid for through homes for outright sale. Philip Glanville, Mayor of Hackney, said: "This award is proof that building genuinely affordable homes doesn't have to mean compromising on good design, and that working closely with local people can help deliver new developments that are firmly rooted in their community, while contributing to the critical need for new homes in Hackney."

Childcare for working families

FROM September, working parents in Hackney could qualify for 30 hours of free childcare.

The changes mean that all three and four-year-olds, who are currently entitled up to 15 hours of free education a week, can access an additional 15 hours if each parent in the family (either lone or two parent) earns between £6,000 and £100,000 a year. This applies to families in paid employment, self-employment, or on a zero hours contract. Apply now to receive the extra free childcare in September. New features for One Account

RESIDENTS in Hackney can now go online to check whether they're registered to vote, in what is thought to be a first nationwide.

The One Account app also allows residents to check and order parking permits using the system.

The feature will link directly to the eStreet system that residents already use to manage parking permits, and displays information on the One Account dashboard.

One Account is the Council's online one-stop shop, where residents can easily access Council services such as paying

ACKNEY recorded its best ever overall result at the London Youth Games for the past 40 years, finishing fourth out of the 33 boroughs which took part.

Hackney had 29 teams finishing in the top nine, amassing 11 team medals and 71 individual medals.

There was more to celebrate as Hackney also won the overall Para Games Trophy for only the second time in its history, with 24 medals. Over 5,000 young people trained towards final selection to represent Hackney, with 640 going on to compete in 29 sports.

The games finished on 8 and 9 July with a weekend of finals at Crystal Palace, but the whole competition takes place over a nine month period. Team medals won this year include those in: indoor rowing; athletics; cycling;

SILVER! Anoushka Minale Cycling

on water rowing; and judo.

All five sports are partnership projects between clubs, schools and the Council, which work towards the development and engagement of young people through sport.

Lamin Bangura, who achieved second place in handball, said: "It feels great, because we've worked hard for this every day and it shows that all the hard work has paid off.

"Just taking part and enjoying the sport is the best feeling. You know you've done great so you're happy. We all did our best, we didn't make mistakes and we got a great medal.'

Para Indoor Rowing Team

One of the many highlights of the games was a fantastic win by Pele Julien, who secured his second senior diving title.

Other amazing feats saw a repeat gold from Maddie Childs in sailing, while Honour Okoroji became Hackney's first female gold medallist in the long jump.

Hackney's record haul included 11 team medals and 71 individual medals

Vawn Humphries also got a gold medal in the boys kayak slalom.

Thomas Archer,

who represented Hackney in swimming, athletics and cross country, also won gold in aquathon.

He said: "It was a good experience and I felt like I was part of a team."

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet

Member for Energy, Sustainability, and Community Services, said: "Hackney's

HANTS of 'Hackney, Hackney' greeted marchers who represented the borough at this year's Pride in London parade.

Close to 150 people - the borough's biggest ever contingent - marched through central London on 8 July to show support for Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer and Intersex plus (LGBTQI+) communities across the globe. Council staff, councillors, businesses, charities, community and youth groups walked alongside Hackney's float – a bin lorry – complete with rainbow flag touting waste operatives, and the message: don't trash love.

The walking group included representatives from the Arcola theatre; Hackney Museum; Project Indigo youth group; Sh! women's store; St Joseph's Hospice; The Glory pub; and Young Hackney.

Nick Connaughton, from the Arcola, said: "We were honoured to march with representatives from across Hackney. The parade recognised that the LGBTQI+ community stands on the shoulders of those who have gone before, whilst reminding us of the work still to be done to achieve true equality.

"The cheers and spontaneous chants of 'Hackney' reminded me how special the borough is, and continues to give energy to our efforts to make Hackney a safe, welcoming and inclusive place for everyone."

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "Being at Pride, with Hackney's biggest ever contingent, amplified the message, that we as a borough march in solidarity and positively affirm our passion for equality, challenging all forms of hate such as homophobia and transphobia, while celebrating and standing with the LGBTQI+ community." Helen Fleming, from St Joseph's Hospice, said: "It was important for us to send a strong message that St Joseph's is an inclusive organisation and that LGBTQI+ people

AS well as taking part in the Pride in London parade, the Council has also launched Hackney Pride 365, a year-round, communityled festival that celebrates the borough's historic, diverse and boundarybreaking LGBTQI+ community. The festival featured a summer gala on 7 July in collaboration with The Glory, one of London's leading LGBTQI venues. The event was held in the beautifully restored Art Deco ballroom of Stoke Newington Town Hall and featured a re-enactment of Liza Minnelli's 1972 award-winning TV show 'Liza with a Z' with a cast of stars from drag queen and king contests, Lipsync1000 and Man Up, plus other favourite Glory performers. Pupils from more than 40 loca primary schools took part in the annual Personal Bests event at Hackney Marshes earlier this month

Photos: Sean Pollock

VER the past decade, more than 25,000 Hackney young people have proved you don't need to beat everyone else to be a winner.

This year, over 2,000 children from 40 local primary schools, took part in the Personal Bests scheme.

The Council-run initative encourages participants to strive to improve on their own personal best times and distances in a variety of sports including javelin, shot put and sprinting.

Finals were held on 5 July at Hackney Marshes, in which 450 young people took part.

It was inspiring to see children's determination to improve themselves and really work hard

St Dominic's primary school took first prize after accumulating the most new personal bests on the day. Lauriston primary came second, and Southwold primary third. Cerise Academy and Stoke Newington School also helped out on the day, volunteering their time to help coach and support the children.

Baraka, 15, a student at The City Academy said: "It was good. I enjoyed coaching the children and developed my leadership skills."

The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Soraya Adejare, was on hand to present awards to the winners.

She said: "It was great to see so many children enjoying sport and it was inspiring to see their determination to improve themselves and really work hard. "I want to congratulate all of the young people who took part. I hope it encourages more children across the borough to take part in sports to help improve their health and well-being while having fun with their classmates."

Personal Bests is a health and wellbeing project launched in the build-up to the 2012 Games in London.

HEN I first moved to the US, I remember standing in Macy's department store when this older gentleman approached," says Matthew Morgan.

"First, I clocked his smart, expensive shoes and tailoring.

"Then I caught sight of his hand and realised with amazement that he was black.

"Here was this beautifully turned out, wealthy black gentleman. And I realised I'd never seen someone like that before in my life."

This is not a story about wealth, the founder of legendary Afropunk festival is keen to emphasise, instead 'it's about opportunity'.

He adds: "I want to help create a place where there's a level playing field for all. I want equality of access, so that it's up to us all whether we choose to take those opportunities."

It could be the mission statement of Afropunk, the festival that he founded back in 2005 with his friend and collaborator James Spooner.

The New York Times has called it 'the most multicultural festival in the US'. This summer, it arrives in the UK for the second year running from 22 to 23 July - with a line up of cutting edge black artists including Lil Simz, The Internet, Petite Noir, Willow Smith, Danny Brown and Jme.

Matthew says: "Afropunk is unapologetically black. But not to the detriment of anyone else. It's much easier to feel comfortable with other groups and demographics if you feel good about yourself and your own identity.

"That feeling has to come first, it's or even a fight at our events. How completely at odds with the media's perception of our community is that?

what enables people to transcend their environment and meet people or opportunities with confidence."

Growing up, Matthew's environment was Stoke Newington. He says: "Mine was a very West Indian community."

In fact, his Russian-Polish mother met his Guyanese father while she was working as a secretary for the President of Guyana.

In 15 years, we've never had a single arrest

He explains: "Her best friend came back to Stoke Newington too, and they both brought West Indian accents with them.

"They were the only white women I knew, so for a long time I just assumed all white women spoke in that accent."

Later, as a young man, he travelled to Brooklyn 'following a woman, of course'. There, he found a community that was 'like an amplification of my own: an incredibly vibrant, energetic, celebratory environment for people of colour'.

There was, however, one key difference.

He says: "America was

- and still is - so much better at creating cultural institutions, colleges, for example, that are specifically for people of colour.

"At first I didn't understand. I thought: why would you selfsegregate like that? But soon, I began to see that if you take race off the table, you let people focus on the real issues.

As a music executive, Matthew spotted an opportunity to do something similar through music. And so the first Afropunk festival was born: a free, community event in Brooklyn highlighting alternative black culture.

Close to 100 people attended the first festival.

Just over 15 years later, it has ballooned to a global cultural phenomenon with an estimated 90,000 people attending.

Despite its wild success, it still retains its original mission statement, says Matthew: to be a place where people can feel safe, and loved, and love themselves.

He continues: "In 15 years, we've never had a single arrest or even a fight at our events. How completely at odds with the media's perception of our community is that?'

Afropunk has now spread to Atlanta, Paris, London and Johannesburg, giving black culture a voice across the globe.

He says: "My dad was a hard-working, working class man. His generation of parents of colour taught us to get our heads down, keep our mouths shut and work hard.

"But I think our young people need more than that now."

primary have celebrated the fact the road outside their school is now closed at peak times to cut pollution and improve safety.

Pupils at St John the Baptist marked the occasion by playing a host of games in the car-free street after school finished on 26 June.

It was also an opportunity for parents to learn about the scheme, which means Crondall Street is now a pedestrian and cyclist only zone from 8.30am to 9.15am, and from 3.15pm 4pm, during term time.

Crondall Street residents can still enter and exit the street by car if their vehicle is registered. Non-registered vehicles entering the street during the scheme operation times will be identified by camera and issued with a fixed penalty notice.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, Transport and Parks, said: "The vast majority of children in Hackney walk or cycle to school, but too many children still make the journey by car.

"I hope this will be the first of many School Streets in the borough. It is just one of the things we're doing to try to make it safer and easier for children to walk and cycle to school."

A second pilot outside Tyssen Community School in Stamford Hill is planned for September. Parents and residents will be consulted on the scheme over the summer.

When the Council has evaluated the success of the two pilots, it will decide whether to roll out the scheme to other schools.

Charities share in rewards

LOCAL charities were presented with £7,500 by residents who have been collecting Hackney Recycling Rewards points to record their recycling levels.

The more types of household waste that residents log as recycled, the more points they amass. Participants also get to vote for which local charities will receive grant funding via the Council-run scheme.

This year, residents voted for Hackney Migrant Centre, which received £3,500; followed by St Mary's Secret Garden, £2,000; and The Sharp End, £1,000. In fourth and fifth place were Headway East London and Immediate Theatre, which were awarded £500 each.

All scheme members also get discounts in local shops, and have a chance to win cash prizes every quarter.

The scheme is free to join, and 30,000 households have signed up since it launched last October.

MALL suffragettes and petite protestors were in abundance for the latest exhibition at #TAG: an art gallery for primary schoolchildren.

Called 'Stand Up', the exhibition focused on the work of Year 1 and Year 2 pupils at Gayhurst Community School, where the gallery is based.

Having studied the lives of suffragette Emily Davison and civil rights heroine Rosa Parks, the children were encouraged to make works of art inspired by the two women's lives.

The exhibition closed on 14 July after a successful run. Bobby, one of the artists, said: "I went to the art gallery and I loved seeing my work since I did hard work on it."

Year 1 teacher Paul

Teeling added: "It was great to see the children's art work in such a professional setting. Every child's work was represented in the exhibition, which was very important."

News in brief

School's welcome to refugees

IF children are the future, one local primary school is making sure that it is an inclusive one. The national charity Citizens UK has officially appointed Randal Cremer a Refugee Welcome School, after staff and pupils spent two years learning about and supporting refugee communities in the UK. Head teacher Jo Riley said: "I want our children to understand how democracy works, but also to empathise with people living in challenging circumstances. By educating our pupils about why people become refugees in the first place, we want them to develop understanding and compassion and also to understand that small, daily acts of kindness can make a difference.'

The school has committed to welcoming children and families from all backgrounds.

Children have collected toys and household goods for refugee families who have resettled in the borough, while class activities and assemblies have celebrated inclusivity.

Head boy George Braithwaite added: "I felt privileged to have the experience to hear firsthand about refugees' lives. It matters because everybody should have the same experience in life and that experience should be a good one.'

Boxers pleased as punch with win

A HACKNEY school with a radical ethos has won an award known as 'the Oscars of education'.

The Boxing Academy, in Hackney Grove, was named 'alternative provision school of the year' at the TES Schools Awards last month.

Launched in 2007 with just four pupils, the school has grown to support 40 students whose challenging behaviour means they are no longer able to attend mainstream schools. As well as learning to concentrate through boxing, 80 per cent of their pupils achieved five GCSE passes last year, well above the national average for alternative provision.

The judges said: "It demonstrates how a brave approach to behaviour can really pay off."

Head teacher Anna Cain said: "We are lucky to be so well supported by our community in Hackney."

VER 5,000 children took to the stage in a bonanza of dance, music and song for the Hackney Schools Music and Dance Festival.

The event marked its 20th anniversary, having grown from a single show to a festival that now stretches across a fortnight – 26 June to 7 July – and features 69 schools.

Held at the Round Chapel in Clapton, the festival celebrates some of the most gifted young musicians in Hackney. Participants got the opportunity to perform alongside famous names including the London Symphony Orchestra.

To mark the 20th anniversary, the festival was also showcased at the Barbican centre, where a one-off concert reflected the breadth of the wider festival programme, taking in bands, vocal groups, choirs, creative ensembles and orchestras.

One parent said: "I am so proud that my son Rudi was able to be a part of it and thankful to all at Hackney Music Service for their hard work and dedication."

Hackney residents including Jonathan Tuitt, former drummer for Emeli Sande, and James Moriarty, now a respected composer.

Over the past 20 years, more than 72,000 children have participated.

This year, that number was bolstered by the introduction of an early years and foundation stage singing festival, proving that even the smallest children can have big voices.

The festival is run by the Hackney Music Service, which is part of Hackney Learning Trust.

News in brief

Young sports stars honoured

MORE than 200 people cheered on the borough's budding athletes as they were presented with awards for their achievements in sports over the past year.

They were recognised at the Young Hackney school and youth sports annual awards in Hackney Town Hall on 12 July.

Team GB sprinter and three time European Champion, Adam Gemili presented over 30 awards.

The accolade of sports personality of the year was given on 'passion, commitment, dedication, fair-play, leadership and resilience' to Zeniece Hall, 16, who as well as being a talented tennis player, also volunteers as a Young Hackney Sports Ambassador.

She said: "I love competing. I like to challenge myself. I've been playing for nine years and I'm now competing at a national level, playing Grade 2 events here and abroad. I like to play as much as I can."

Awards were also give to Stormont House pupils, who gained a Sports Leaders Level 1 qualification and to Young Hackney Sports Ambassadors, who gained a Level 2 qualification.

Hackney pirates take the charity crown

A LOCAL group has been crowned the best small charity of the year, by the national Foundation for Social Improvement (FSI).

Hackney Pirates, which works to build literacy and confidence among young people, won the FSI Small Charity Big Impact Award last month.

Last year, Hackney Pirates helped 520 young people, between the ages of nine and 12, whose reading age improved an average 52 per cent faster than their peers.

One young pirate said: "It changed my confidence at putting hands up in the classroom."

The charity is now set to feature in a film and a book that will be delivered to 10 Downing Street.

The charity will also get expert help and advice from the FSI on how to make an even bigger impact.

Jude Williams, Hackney Pirates chief executive, said: "It's a great testament to the hard work of the volunteers, young people, school partners and staff team on our reading and publishing projects. We hope it will help us expand our impact in the coming years."

health

ESIDENTS can now manage their health online in the same way they manage other areas of their life such as banking and shopping.

GP online services are a quick, easy and secure way to make and cancel appointments, order repeat prescriptions and view health records, including information about medication, allergies, vaccinations, previous illnesses and test results.

Everyone who is registered with a GP can get access to their practice's online services.

So far, 1.7million Londoners have registered for online services with 89 per cent of those surveyed saying registering is easy to do.

Evidence shows that patients who are involved in their health and care have less hospital admissions and better health outcomes overall.

Through online access, patients can now book appointments, request their medications and view selected medical records without having to visit the surgery said: "Digital technology has changed the way we can manage our health.

"Through online access, patients can now book appointments, request their medications and view selected medical records without having to call the surgery.

"It has completely revolutionised the way patients can access their GP practice and our satisfaction rates have never been higher. "I can't emphasise the benefits enough and strongly encourage patients to sign up."

Alexander Smyth, a patient who has used the service at Richmond Road, added: "I have been impressed with this service.

"I go online to book a phone call with a doctor, that call happens within a few hours and then I'm seen the same day.

> "The online functionality is a welcome move for the practice too.

"The staff have been very kind and informative and treated my concerns with sensitivity." Signing up is quick and easy. People simply need to tell their surgery that they would like to register.

Patients will then receive a unique username and password and can start using online services straight away.

The services available online will depend on the system that each GP practice uses. Residents are advised to ask their practice what services they offer when they sign up, and in some instances they will be able to book their first appointment online.

News in brief

Name new app, win a voucher

ARE you a budding design guru or a wonderful wordsmith? City and Hackney GP confederation is developing a new free app that will be a one-stop shop for healthcare needs: from booking appointments with a GP to healthy living info and mental health advice. City and Hackney residents are invited to come up with the best name and icon for the app.

The winning submissions will receive an Amazon voucher worth £50. Submit your ideas by 7 August via e-mail: pbeare@nhs.net.

The icon design specifications are available at: https:// developer.apple.com/ios/human-interfaceguidelines/graphics/image-size-and-resolution/

The outdoor gym in London Fields is already popular

Revamped outdoor gym is a hit

FITNESS lovers have been taking advantage of the hot weather by using the new outdoor gym in London Fields. The equipment includes a set of parallel bars, a series of chin-up bars and space for floor exercises. The new outdoor gym is at the southern end of London Fields, near Broadway Market, and replaces old equipment in the children's play area.

Taking a break from his upside down situps, local resident Sam, said: "I love the location of the new equipment, it reminds me of Venice Beach." For more details on the facilities available at London Fields, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/london-fields

Festival highlights mindfulness

LOCAL mental health charity Mind in the City, Hackney and Waltham Forest, is holding an event, inviting residents to 'take a pause' from hectic everyday life using simple mindfulness techniques.

The festival will also promote the area's Wellbeing Network, which offers a range of therapeutic groups and courses to support people to improve their mental wellbeing. The event takes place at Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, on 26 July, from 6pm to 8.30pm. For more information on the Pause campaign, e-mail: services@ mindchwf.org.uk; or visit: www.mindinhackney.org. uk/Pages/Category/the-pause-campaign

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see Hackney has 57 councillors representing Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville, was directly elected by the borough in September 2016. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3269. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Rosemary Sales.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – a social enterprise restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. With summer well underway, it's all about mixing up those BBQ favourites with new and exciting flavour twists. Here are three different marinades to make your barbecue chicken

Barbecue chicken marinades

Each recipe is for 4 drumsticks to feed 4 people

Ingredients

extra juicy and tasty.

Honey-dijon:

- 2 tbsp honey
- 2 tbsp Dijon mustard
- 1 tbsp olive oil
- 2 garlic cloves, chopped
- 1/2 tsp kosher salt • 1/2 tsp ground black pepper (Prep time: 15 mins).

Balsamic rosemary:

- 100ml balsamic vinegar
- 50ml olive oil

rosemary

- 2 tbsp soy sauce
- 1/2 tsp golden brown sugar
- 3/4 tsp freshly ground pepper • 100g finely chopped fresh
- 5 garlic cloves, chopped (Prep time: 15 mins).

15-20 mins

Cooking time 15-20 mins

Preparation time

Thai coconut:

- 250ml light coconut milk
- 2 tbsp soy sauce
- 1 tbsp brown sugar
- 1 large garlic clove, roughly chopped
- 1 tbsp chopped fresh ginger
- 1 small Thai or Fresno chilli pepper, thinly sliced, optional (Prep time: 20 mins).

Method

- Mix together all of the marinade ingredients to form a smooth paste
- Season the chicken and marinate in the sauce for 1 day
- To cook, barbecue for 15-20 minutes until cooked through.

Waterhouse – through Blue Marble Training - supports young people across the borough towards careers in the restaurant industry. Owned by Shoreditch Trust, income from this enterprise goes back into training programmes in the borough. Waterhouse in Orsman Road, N1, is open Mon to Fri, 9am-3pm. Evenings and weekends available for large bookings and private events. For more info, visit: www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk For bookings e-mail: eat@waterhouse restaurant.co.uk; or call: 020 7033 0123.

Have your say on the self-service payment centre

LAST year, the Council introduced a self-service payment centre in Hillman Street, beside Hackney Service Centre.

More services are now provided online and through self-service kiosks via the One Account system: where residents can pay for all their council services in one place.

Six months on, and the Council is asking for views on what works well, and if anything can be changed to improve the way residents access and use the service.

The survey can be completed online at: www.consultation. hackney.gov.uk; or visit the self-service payment centre to pick up a paper copy.

For more details, e-mail: consultation@ hackney.gov.uk or call: 020 8356 3366.

The consultation closes on 1 September.

Notice is given that BENJAMIN JAMES MACKINNON applied to HACKNEY COUNCIL to vary the premises licence at: e5 Millhouse, Railway Arch 396 Metmore Terrace. London. E8 3PH

In order to make the following variation to the licence: The supply of alcohol for on-premises use to complement our existing off-premises licence. The intended use for an on-premises license is for private evening events, to include small scale private ticketed events such as supper clubs, plus internal and external events run by/for local businesses and community groups. Over the past two years we have operated many successful events in a responsible and thoughtful manner, using Temporary Event Notices. An on-premises license would allow us to continue running events of this nature, building on our ositive exisiting relationships with local residents and businesses.
